large party will go to Petoskey in a private car, and others go to a hundred different places. A gown which has been considered just the thing for children for a number of years, and was adopted several months ago in Eastern cities, has made its appearance here. It is the Gretchen, a neglige gown, and a vast improvement over the much-ridiculed Mother Hubbard. It is made with a waist about seven or eight inches leas, and a straight, full skirt sewed into the waist without any belt. The sleeves are made with a puff at the shoulder, elbow and wrist. The seck is out rather low, and a little frill of the material or lace stands up all around it. A picturesque one was made of dark blue lawn with old-fashioned figures, and was as quaint as could be. They are comfortable, like the Mother Hubbards, and make the wearer more presentable to a sudden visitor or friends than the other garment. Some of the young girls who wear them are just as pretty as a minute.

If it was not for tennis, a great many summer hours would be void of any enjoyment whatever, as there is positively nothing going on socially new but the game of ball and racket. The two tournaments have had sufficient life to interest others than the friends of the contestants, and for all the games there have been a number of spectators. To those who know nothing of the game the knocking of the ball back and forth over the net is as bad as a sphinx's riddle to solve, while those who do know how to play de-clare it one of the most fascinating games they ever knew. The costumes are formed with a view to comfort and ease, and the exercise brings with it a fine opportunity for physical strength and development.

sometimes their versions of what they see are amusing. Not long since there was a wedding up-town, and quite a number of children who are in the family were present. The officiating clergyman made the ceremony a very brief one, and the children caught it all, and now not an hour passes that the ceremony is not gone through with by the little ones. On one occasion the two to be married were pronounced man and wife in a very short time, when the miniature clergyman astonished the family by saying: "It's so hot in here, we'll have to go in the hall to pray," and they all followed him to the cooler spot, where they finished the service.

General Boulanger in Chicago. Chicago Times.

united in marriage, at the residence of T. B. Carson.

The autograph of General Boulanger, the man of the hour in Europe, is on the registe of the Chicago club. At the centennia celebration of the battle of Yorktown General Boulanger was the representative of France to this country. As such he received the attention due his position, and was so much pleased with this country that he was induced to pay Chicago a visit. A member of the Chicago club, recall-ing that event, said yes orday:
"What a charming guest he was. He speaks"
English as well as I, and although some members of the club are quite proficient in Fren General Boulanger requested that we should all be American. I can recall some of his expres-sions, for they were so full of gratitude that £ never can forget them.

"Ah,' he said, 'I like you Americans. Let us speak the same language, so that when I go back to France and think of you, as I always shall, it will be that I knew you only as you are."

"Again, one evening when he saw a gentleman paying marked attention to a lady he said, clapping his bands: "That is so like an American. centieman that I feel quite at home. And you are so young a people."

"I remember when he was about to leave us he said to several present: 'I do not wonder at the grandeur of your city. It is a marvel in many respects—but your people, ah, such a people could do anything! If we only had you in Parie!"
